

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for reducing leaching and bioaccessibility of a heavy metal from particulate matter includes the steps of treating the particulate matter with phosphate, chloride and iron additives; wetting the additive-containing particulate matter with water; and incubating the particulate matter at a temperature above ambient temperature for a time sufficient to achieve the goals of the invention.